

The "packages" that our satellite company, Dish Network, offers are really ridiculous. I pay $25/month for the "basic" package called "America's Top 60. My wife and I watch only 27 of the 60 channels offered and yet have to pay for all 60. Let people pick and choose. I can't imagine my cable bill would be any higher for picking the 27 channels we watch, as opposed to paying for 33 channels in a package of 60 that we never use. At the very least, the actual costs of each channel offering should be listed somewhere so we can know how much of our programming budget goes to shopping channels or music channels, etc. that we never watch.
